Occasionally browsing the world wide web throws up some highly challenging information. Most of the time it can be disregarded as the insanity of digitally connected whackos. From time to time, certain narratives stick in the mind of the consumer and despite being memory holed, the narrative endures.

War Perception management Security Intelligence Religion Politics

UPDATE:

As of June 2025, the global support for Israel has reached an all time low. Social media has erupted with a massive endorsement of Irans bombing of Israeli targets. As a direct result of the utterly fallacious blitzkrieg that Israel waged against the civilians of Gaza, protests against the Likud party, Benjamin Netenyahu and the state of Israel are seen in many population centres across the world. However as with all mainstream news reporting, the facts are not being accurately delivered to the masses.

The apparent attack on the Nova music festival at Re'im, Israel on 7 October 2023, provided the IDF and Mossad with the justification they required to raze parts of Gaza. The imagery that has emerged backs up the claims of genocidal activity. The justification relies on contrived narratives and even more contrived video footage splashed across the major news outlets. Put simply, Hamas cooperated with the IDF in creating a massive perception management stunt to dominate the News and give Israel yet another excuse for waging war on defenceless civilians.

The falsehood of Hamas was clearly witnessed with the alleged raping of Israeli hostages. The news channels rushed to proliferate imagery of a woman being ushered into the back of a car with blood stained track suit trousers on. Anyone even remotely familiar with trauma could see that this woman was an actress. She did not display any of the expected behavioural patterns of someone who had been subjected to days of relentless abuse. In fact she looked about as compelling as the numerous crisis actors that have besmirched our screen over the past two decades. This in turn justified massive backlash against Palestinians by outraged settlers and IDF personnel.

Some of the supposedly vile and vicious IDF who had been involved with the unconscionable actions against innocent Palestinians were captured by Hamas irregulars and paraded in front of the cameras of Reuters journalists. Logically numerous people emerged from behind the camera and visited some very real physical violence to these apparently sadistic Israelis. At that point, the Hamas members transporting these alleged murderers instantly mobilised to stamp out any possible recurrence of this seemingly justified violence. The only possible purpose being that these people must be kept alive and untouched so that they could be tried in a proper and righteous legal framework. That obviously never happened and the whole thing appeared to be a total crock of shit, cooked up by crisis actors. Most likely a far reaching intelligence stunt to sew division and hatred among an international audience.

In addition, the footage of IDF soldiers being dragged out through the hatches on their tank turrets, was revealed to be rubber mannequins often used in training exercises by the military. About as compelling as the body under the back wheels of a London bus in 2017. Basically the most half arsed subterfuge that could possibly have been concocted - again.

However fallacious these false flags and hoaxes are, they always lead to very real losses of life. A great many Palestinian, non combatant civilians including women and children have most certainly been killed since the 2023 incident. This is the ultimate goal of the intelligence forces behind these and all other scenarios that are dumped into the popular consciousness by Reuters controlled agencies such as the BBC and Sky News. War is profitable and the mindset of these intelligence factions is broken beyond repair. They are completely insane and answer to nobody.

Neutron Bomb Yemen

Previously, it was the opinion of TEFLONRABBIT that the govt of Israel were going to sanction the IDF using Neutron Weaponry against the Palestinians. While this is still very much a possibility, the world has not united against Israel in the way proposed by the 2002 narrative illustrated below. However, the whining and bitching being done by Israel now that they face a much more serious enemy, is rapidly turning the minds of various first world populations against them.

This is of course, all part of a long running policy by the Zionist agenda. The gains made by what is colloquially referred to as 'The Jews' through the status of the underdog has created a very lucrative platform for numerous ideologies and corrupt business goals. Nobody can possibly criticise anything to do with 'The Jews' - because holocaust. This has become possibly the most tired and repetitive ideology that the modern world has ever had to endure. It replaced the previous excuse of - because exiles and pales only in comparison to the classic because anti-semitism.

Currently the world is going through some profound social changes. The psychopathic secret societies are going hell for leather to depopulate the planet. This is completely in line with the signal that they sent with the Georgia Guidestones. According to their insane masonic belief system, they told us and we did nothing about it, therefore whatever happens next is on us. However this is not accurate. Millions of people have rejected their insidious and malevolent actions and have blatantly called them out. Yet they choose to ignore this failure to deceive and have blatantly carried on with their insane desire to create a managed cataclysm. As a result, it's almost impossible to watch a single mainstream news broadcast without spitting in disgust at the copious amount of agenda driven, unscientific and popularist horseshit spewing out of the screen.

The sick attitude of this cult holds power in great esteem. The ability to listen in on other peoples thoughts is their greatest currency. It has allowed them to control those whom they disseminate the technology to, in ways which are frankly obscene. For the most part, anyone who is allowed to operate their SIG-INT (signals intelligence) antennae and buy into the military run electromagnetic low frequency intelligence system (ELF-INT) must be a mind control victim. There seems to be a requirement for operatives who are so blackmailed that they will never form bonds with any other human being and for the most part they don't tolerate rational human beings having access to the technology. This is emphasised by the current out of control growth of the so called LGBTQi+ community. Those who have allowed themselves to be mind controlled into having their testicles cut off and fake breasts grafted onto their chest, are obviously so easily manipulated that they will never represent a threat to the wannabe small G gods that have now (thanks to the WHO) infected every department of every civil services on Earth.

Throughout history, there have been intercessions by a much more technologically sophisticated culture(s) that have come to the aid of certain interest groups who have decided to engage in genocide. From the aerial destruction of the Cathar castles and the burning of their inhabitants, to the billions of dollars pumped into Israel by the USA and Britain. If anything could ever speak to the frankly Satanic nature of these ideologues, it is their repeated assistance granted to the worst aspects of the human race. They will stop at nothing to turn us into the most vile and debased versions of ourselves that could possibly be imagined. Their hidden agendas of Baal worship, child mutilation (physical, psychological, economic and spiritual) and other unconscionable atrocities have plagued the human race for millennia. It is this sickening cult which co-opted the technology of the past and have used it to enjoy a technological advantage over the rest of humanity.

It is for this reason that the Catholic Church has periodically waged war on them. Whether through events such as Operation Starfish Prime or through the medium of the Spanish Inquisition. The policy of the Inquisition was that if they worshipped as Jews, they were left alone. If they hid their witchcraft among Christians and lived their lives as 'Conversos' then they were burned to death in front of their peers to act as a deterrent. If ever the world needed a specific reincarnation of anyone from the past, it is the steely eyed clarity of Tomas De Torquemada. Make no mistake, the Satanic, Baal and Moloch worshipping infiltrators of the Abrahamic faith system are the enemies of the contemporary human race and we have tolerated their depraved insanity for far too long.

It has become impossible to view any major media production without picking up on some obscure occult symbolism hidden in the over-all theme. Some of them, such as The Royal Society sending the astronomer royal to the 1969 Apollo 11 press conference armed with challenging scientific questions, are subtle and pass most people's eye unnoticed. Elon Musk and his SPQR salute would be one of the ones that was less subtle.

There is a clear distinction between the quite different peoples represented by soundbytes such as "the Jews", followers of Judaism, Hebrews and Israelis. Those who left Egypt under the guidance of their god, would be the first incarnation of what we know as 'the Jews'. However it seems that they probably weren't actually in communication with the creator of all reality. That was simply a massive con and one which they still will not concede. Who or more realistically what they were in communication with, was carried aloft and used to part the tide in the shallows of the Red Sea. They then went on to use it to bring down the walls of Jericho. While this is a highly contentious issue for the Rabbinical community, it's written in their own scriptures and really it's a matter of interpretation. To become irate or violent about interpretation of scripture isn't discussion or debate, it's extremist, radical ideology and it must be ended for the human race to actually progress.

Contemporary followers of Judaism would best be described as those among Israelis and the diaspora of 'the Jews' who do not identify as Zionists. They probably do not follow the policies of the Likud party and probably agree that Bibi Melikowski should be in custody in the Netherlands. According to Zionist propaganda readily available on social media, only six percent of 'the Jews' self identify as non Zionists. It's probably much higher and their numbers are surely growing since the Hannibal directive was rolled out on October 7th 2024.

As far as anyone can tell, the 'Haribous' or Hebrews were one of the tribes that worked on one of the several Pharaonic renovations to the Khafre pyramid. Their cartouche can be seen in the Great Pyramid to this day. However it seems that whatever they were doing was probably related to decommissioning or securing the Great Pyramid. This resulted in their discovering what the pyramids had actually been built for and challenging the Pharaoh of the day. Exactly which Pharaoh, is almost impossible to ascertain. It might have been 3-4k years ago or it might have been 7k years ago, or it might be both and more besides.

It's entirely likely that the exodus narrative is actually the combination of dozens of records of similar events. One of which involves a substantial number of the Haribous and other tribes of the Sea Peoples (such as the Dan) leaving the Mediterranean via the Black sea and the *Dan*ube, settling in *De*nmark, the *Hebri*des and *Hybras*il and interbreeding with the different haplogroups in the area.

Likewise there are known shared language origins between French Breton and Brythonic Welsh. This combined with the highly anomalous emergence of Cymruglyphics (an alternative to the Rosetta stone based on Welsh) indicates that the Carnac stones were erected by another of these migrating tribe(s) of Sea People who had decided to leave the MENA region and form their own breakaway civilisations. They dug out the Venus pools for their Bronze Age cormorant navigation technology and probably built many of the ten thousand other megalithic sites in Britain.

While those descended from the migrating Sea People are technically related to people from the MENA regions, they are not part of 'the Jews'. They are probably the most likely candidates to represent the so called 'lost tribes'. This would explain much of the reluctance of the British government to allow the connection to Wales and the Scottish Crown to be severed by independence. Their exiling of 'the Jews' and declaring themselves as Gods new chosen people was undoubtedly based on this 'lost tribe' provenance. While this may have been something that happened centuries ago, which was in turn based on something that happened millennia ago, it is still dictating what we are now seeing happen on a global level.

Israelis are obviously citizens of the country in the Eastern Mediterranean region known as 'the Levant', formerly British Palestine, the Kingdom of God, homeland of the Peleset or Kingdom of biblical Kings such as Herod, David and Solomon. It should be noted that Israel is recognised by the UN, the Eurovision song contest and mot importantly the Rothschild banking cartel, the Vatican controlled CIA (and most critically of all) the highly Satanic surveillance paradigm owned and operated by British signals intelligence.However, Israelis are not the Israelites of the Bible. Nowhere in any part of the old testament or the KJV does it relate the Israelites to the Levant other than when 'the Jews' went down into Canaan. The subsequent tantrum thrown by their god is what constitutes the basis for the first of the ten commandments. Blah blah take no other gods before me, yadda yadda cruel and jealous and my fire will burn among thee etc etc.

(Note: The inclusion of possibly interpreted irreverence in regards to the veracity of scripture, is intended more of an indictment of illusory hierophant priest class ideology, not biting a thumb at the gods. As every good magi will agree, it's the intent that's important, not the syntax).

With the recent escalations in the Middle East involving formidable ballistic weaponry, the world audience is being stoked up with the possible threat of nuclear warfare. Yet another chapter in the Cold War trope of mutually assured destruction. Something which paid for a whole shitload of new kitchens and shopping holidays to Dubai. Those who derive a healthy income from the military industrial complex are always keen to try and get the best value from their long standing perception management narratives.

With all of these game-plans being played out through the medium of fake news and even faker commentary, it does indeed seem that we are moving inexorably toward some form of end game. Whatever the precise nature of the atrocities are, it is undeniable that events are becoming increasingly significant. A climate which is clearly on schedule to deliver the goals detailed in the original article below.

According to cult figurehead and probable 'channeler' Benjamin Creme, the concept of the anti-christ is massively misunderstood by the majority of people. His take on it is that the anti-christ is not a person, but an energy which wipes away the cruft of the old ways and paves the way for the dawning of the new ways. In relation to the narrative detailed in The Return of The King, it may be that William VII is actually the preparation for his successor - Arthur III. This would indicate that the insane NWO agenda of one world government also has a requirement for a one world Monarch. Yet more scripture tie ins exist with the opening of seals by the messiah (the lamb), Thereby releasing the horsemen of the apocalypse and ushering in a duration of darkness and tribulation.

Once more, Britannia will rule the waves, or so they hope.

Circa Oct 2002, an article appeared on a backwater web page which had meta tagging in line with the LOTR film 'Return of the King'. Many warez fans were disappointed to find that instead of a leaked mpeg of the forthcoming Peter Jackson blockbuster, the page contained nothing but text. The majority of these users read as far as the word 'prophecy' and promptly browsed on. Some did not and the content was perceived as representing seriously unusual writing. The theme of the text was based on a conversation between a British journalist and an American professional on an airline flight in 1997. Unfortunately the original text has either been deleted and removed from archive.org or it is so difficult to find that it may as well have been. The main theme is as follows:

The journalist was settling into his transatlantic flight the early hours of 31 August 1997 when an announcement from the air crew disrupted everyone's attempts to slumber. The message alerted the passengers to the death of Princess Diana, Dodi Al-fayed and Henri Paul in the Pont de l'Alma tunnel in Paris, France. As with most who experienced this news there was a tangible air of shock among the passengers. None more so that the man sitting next to the journalist. He had turned white, was sweating and exclaimed:

> Oh God, they've actually gone and done it...

Naturally the journalist was somewhat taken aback and asked the man to expound on his statement. Over the course of several double whiskies the man proceeded to recount his understanding of a highly challenging narrative which traversed several decades and had not yet reached it's conclusion. At this time (2023) it still has not come to it's final point. He went into elaborate detail as to the fact that the death of Diana was no accident and was all part of a highly elaborate plan which would result in extensive international conflict. According to his anecdotal evidence, the high profile incident was the beginning of a chain of events which would result in a major conflict in the middle east. The journalist acknowledged the conversation and did not openly challenge the mans narrative. By the time he had returned to his home he was so taken aback by the details that he was compelled to write an article and store it on his computer hard drive. With it being such a challenging subject matter, he didn't attempt to sell it to any of his usual outlets and simply filed it under 'curious' and got on with other things.

The chain of events recounted by the American man included several events which had already happened. Those being events such as the WTC incident and the second Gulf War. He also predicted that another major conflict would arise in the middle east as a direct result of a massive atrocity committed against the Palestinians by the Israeli armed forces. His narrative was not overly specific on the precise nature of the atrocity, but was quit clear as to the fact that it would be condemned by the entire Arab world. So vehement would their reaction be that they would unite in an all out drive to destroy Israel completely. It is at this point that the title of the prophecy / conspiracy theory comes into light.

The threat to Israel and their allies would be such that heir to the British monarchy Prince William of Windsor would emerge as a harbinger of peace. Apparently his main qualification for this role would be his mothers charitable work. Diana was indeed known for speaking out against inhumanity and had been the figurehead for an anti landmine campaign shortly before her untimely demise. There is also a theory that his grandmother Elizabeth the 2nd is reported to have been a descendant of the prophet Muhammed. With these and various other strings to his bow, William would be well placed to broker a peace between the Arab world on one side and Israel and the USA on the other. As with most actions on the international stage by British envoys, this would not be an altruistic endeavour despite being marketed as such. Instead it would allude to part of a New World Order playbook which places Britain in a position of wielding massive and absolute international power.

Generally speaking when anyone starts harping on about the NWO it's usually received with some shaking of heads and downward glances. However this Americans demeanour was such that the journalist was left in no doubt that whatever this mans background was, he certainly believed what he was saying. As with many jobs, journalists are not unaccustomed to hearing nonsensical gibberish being offered up as the truth. If this man was a complete and utter fantasist, he was somehow presenting himself as a highly compelling individual and seemed to be utterly genuine.

Recently (Oct 2023) the world has been exposed to an escalation of conflict between Hamas and the IDF. Social media has been saturated with highly emotional reactions and various protests have occurred all over the world. Videos of conflicts between Americans have circulated online. Posters being stuck to lampposts have been torn down by counter activists. Some videos appear to show anti sabotage mechanisms being employed with razor blades attached to the underside of the posters. While it would be easy to be impacted by the emotionally polarised content, there are more than a few discrepancies with some of the content. Not least of all there appears to be some recycling of narratives going on.

The attacking of infants was used by the daughter of a Kuwaiti ambassador in an emotionally charged video in 1990. The Nayirah testimony was revealed to be total propaganda and was based on events which simply did not occur. To use such a similar narrative smacks of laziness and simultaneously arrogance. In addition much of the video content claiming to show Hamas insurgents with their kidnapped hostages appears to be questionable. Onlookers are prevented from beating the hostages with the Hamas operatives being quite visibly emphatic in terms of not allowing them to be harmed. This does not gel with the overall narrative and reduces the credibility of the content.

Regardless of any media manipulation which all sides are quite clearly guilty of, there does appear to be a deliberate attempt to whip up the global population into a sectarian frenzy. This comes hot on the heels of the Ukraine conflict which has seen the Ukrainian government accused of massive money laundering. Virtue signalling social media users have ditched their Ukraine flags and are now arguing the toss about Israel / Palestine instead. Anything goes, it seems when it comes to distracting people from focusing on the long term effects of the 2019 Covid psyop.

Exactly what this alleged atrocity will look like is anyone's guess. One of the most probable would be the use of atomic weaponry by the IDF. Israel is an exceedingly high tech nation considering it's population and has used neutron based weaponry in the past. The advantages of the neutron bomb include low to zero residual radiation and relatively low damage to infrastructure. In comparison to conventional nuclear warheads, neutron weaponry is far more suitable for use on a close neighbour. It is however, exceedingly fatal for any human beings caught in the blast area. Given the high density of the Palestinian conurbations, it would be unlikely that an air blast above a populated region would leave many survivors. There are many people across the Arab world (nee Ottoman Empire) who believe that an attack on any Muslim is an attack on all Muslims. Part of traditional Islamic belief is that all Muslim people are part of the 'Umah' or brotherhood. Consequently an incident of this magnitude could well galvanise public opinion among the nearly half a billion Muslims resident in the states of the Arab world. This would fit with the prediction detailed by the anonymous American whistle-blower.

At this time it seems clear that major effort has gone into stirring up a strategy of tension, both between Israel and Palestine and also across the rest of the digitally connected world. Where this leads to is not known by most, but there are some people who have a vested interest in seeing this prediction manifested in everyone's reality. What we can be sure of is that over the next few years, there will be many more attempts to hijack the perception of the global population. Events are moving at a pace and there is definitely an agenda being pursued by someone.

As of February 2024 the heir apparent has taken on a greater share of the monarchical duties. With advancing years, His Royal Highness Charles Philip Arthur George Windsor is seeking to reduce his public engagements. This incredibly brief reign portends a much longer reign by his forthcoming successor His Royal Highness William Arthur Philip Louis Windsor. At the time of his succession he will arguably become the third Arthur to rule the British Isles. This would tie in with the prophecy of The return of 'The King'. The prolific number of ardent royalists in the UK could be enough support to change the constitution into something much more of a monarchy than it currently appears. After all, King Arthur will need his twelve nights to advise him.

The Duchy of Cornwall is home to Tintagel, the legendary seat of King Arthur's reign. It seems suspiciously coincidental that the Duchy has always been the personal property of the Prince of Wales. Every year, the monarch attends a ceremony which requires that they request permission from the Lord Mayor to enter the legally separate State of the City of London. Queen Elizabeth the 2nd claimed that her favourite place to reign from was Balmoral. The furthest royal estate from London. It is not outwith the realms of possibility that the middle of the 21st century could see a rebuilt Tintagel providing the southern equivalent of Balmoral.

The recent New World exploits of the Duke and Duchess of Wessex have provided plenty of column space for tabloids. They now seem to have reconciled any ready made, media friendly spats, have dutifully put aside any differences and rallied around King Charles. Many have been crying out for a stronger monarchy since British Politics began to resemble the cult of personality seen in the USA. This recent behaviour will certainly strengthen the concept of a stable monarchy after the unavoidably negative exposure caused by Prince Andrew, the Duke of York. All in all it does look very much like the UK monarchy are galvanising for some kind of serious changes. Hopefully their subjects won't be too indoctrinated by the mass hysteria associated with the decline of the political system.

There are many forces at work in contemporary global politics, many of whom have a long term agenda which will impact us all.
