The average user reports a series of individually distinctive signatures when using web applications. most are familiar with the concept of their IP address being used to potentially track them. This level of tracking is only the cold vapour wisps above the tip of the iceberg. Since Web 2.0 became the norm, users have been experiencing tailored output. When blogging becomes content creation with a revenue model, the clandestine community are all over it like a microwave induced rash in order to ...'get the best value'.

Internet Social Engineering Twitter Web Conspiracy Intelligence Police Crime Confidence Trick Psychology Britain Politics Corruption

Since the early 2000's, user generated web content has become as ubiquitous as online banking. It underpins most of what we use the world wide web for and even dictates our shopping habits. The world of social media has become massively monetised to the point where Svengali type 'star makers' ruthlessly plunder the content creator market for new recruits. Unsurprisingly these types of acquisitions are not discussed openly on their public facing web presences. Instead the information presented will include generalised verbage and bland soundbytes. The reality is that they operate in an incredibly vicious and underhand marketplace which is riddled with various so called 'intelligence' interests.

As has been mentioned many times on TEFLONRABBIT, the so called 'intelligence agencies' rarely exhibit anything approximating a sensible philosophy in anything whatsoever. This is mainly due to them having been infiltrated over the centuries by a cult of psychopathy, sexual dysfunction and beta plus aspirational mind set. in other words, the exact antithesis of the core values taught to inspire the population into leading conscientious lives.

Combine a paradigm of 'big data' with the broken minds displayed by a cult of psychopathy and what emerges is a grotesque reflection of the worst parts of the human psyche. Social media is awash with half baked stunts in provocation and clandestine operations. This is nothing new and has been happening across various online communities since the days of MySpace or even Angelfire and Geocities.

The modus operandi is fairly monochromatic, clandestine interests have ever been met through the medium of the set up. This would be a fairly straight forward constant were it perceived by the cult in rational terms. However these people are not rational. They believe that using common sense is a barrier to productivity. As a result their ability to accurately perceive value (as understood by the rest of society) has become hideously confused, diluted and ultimately perverted.

Fueling this necrotic and self defeating methodology is a psychological warfare tool which compels the cult member into basically wasting their own (and everybody else's) time. The incentives are of course, rarely commensurate with the efforts expended. The cult does not prosper by paying a fair wage for a days work. Instead they are eternally driven forward with some illusory carrot and a very real stick.

The carrot would be cashing in/out on the concept of gang-stalking creating a 'product'. Their elaborate and ultimately insane ideas about intelligence activity creating products does at some point turn into cash payments. Or so they are lead to believe.

The stick on the other hand, is the simple truth that they are all being blackmailed with hard evidence which could fetch them a substantial jail sentence. Such insurance is demanded by their creators in the cult. Without it, the machine fails in terms of credibility. There's no value in someone who won't allow themselves to be compromised. If they don't have any insurance hanging over their head that they genuinely fear, there is no effective stick.

These motivators are deployed against these people in order to propagate the cult. As with any organised crime syndicate, cash flows up and shit flows down. At some point, their ludicrously inept management strata decided that growth was of more value than integrity of product. This lead to increasingly ill conceived activity which would be best described as gaming the system.

When these factors combine on Social media, the concept of value takes and even more bizarre turn. As discussed many time on TEFLONRABBIT, the greatest value for these cult members lies not in financial gain, but in convincing their controllers that they've managed to con somebody else - with the same con that they were conned with. This is a fundamental and key component of the cult architecture and it primarily revolves around sexual dysfunction. Hence the media frenzy over celebrity occult practices and such snafus as the highly politicised Jeffery Epstein scandal.

In January 2013 Aimee Jones from Oxfordshire 'accidentally' posted an image of herself with no pants on. The #EbayYellowSkaterDress viral event skyrocketed the value of a 20 quid frock into over £150,000 worth of viral history souvenir. Given the amount of money involved, a couple of suspicious eyebrows were raised. These lead to the outing of Aimee's fiance as a recent graduate of 'Internet Marketing'. To consider this as a clandestine psyop would not be misplaced.

The most immediate incentives behind this Benny Hill meets Littlewoods Catalog stunt are fairly obvious. There's the hundred and fifty grand, which will always come in handy. Then there's the pinup value afforded to Miss Jones. She was suddenly the subject of attention by literally millions of men. This has a distinct esoteric value. It would also have distinct value were she to pursue any range of employment options including nudity. She was quite fit after all.

The clear aesthetic value of a mid 20's Miss Jones innocently capturing an image of herself half naked creates an implication of voyeurism. This in conjunction with her being a proponent of complete exfoliation or shaving, creates a possible interpretation of a preference for hairless women. or for the purposes of implication ... young girls. She was also at the time, apparently engaged to be married. This then creates a perspective of coveting thy neighbours wife. For some religious fanatics, this is worthy justification for surveillance.

What appears outwardly as viral surge in the wake of a monetary lapse in judgement by a thrifty skater girl, becomes a massive psyop targeting heterosexual men. Numerous men used both the viral wave and the auction itself as an outlet for some form of psycho-sexual release. Again, this has a substantial esoteric value due to many of the secret societies being practitioners of occult sex magic.

Exactly how much visibility Miss Jones, or even her ~~accomplice~~ fiance, had on the scale or reach of this apparent psychological operation is not clear. By the nature of the cult, the expectation is to always keep the subjects of any operation as much in the dark as possible. This is of course delivered through the medium of the con. By the look of things, Miss Jones didn't have much of a problem knowing that several hundred thousand men had achieved critical mass while visualising her in a full state of nudity. Whether the average mastubarian or even Miss Jones herself, believe in the power of the law of attraction and sex magic, there are a whole shit ton of people who do. Many of them are exceptionally powerful, influential, psychopathic and as such... dangerous.

Conning people whom they believe to be lesser into potentially humiliating actions of a sexual nature, is bread and butter to some of the aforementioned broken minded clandestine psychopaths. Their lives are not their own and the only thing they can do is go along with the psychopathic cult agenda which boils down to one simple concept;

> get out there and develop on the land

Obviously this translates into finding anyone that can be conned with anything and trying to get a result. Due to the insurance held over these low rent wannabes, they're emphatically encouraged to leverage their position. This is touted as being bold and audacious, but is really just creating yet more chaos. More unpredictability is considered beneficial in regards to kicking the can down the road and creating yet more busy work.

Should the cult member be unable to con their target with the same con that effectively ended their own autonomy, their product ceases to exist. Due to the nature of their organised criminal enterprise, there are other people literally banking on the success of the con of the other lesser cult member. Those expectations translate into uses of the previously described motivators in order to assure a win in terms of product viability. Again, these people are not rational and quite clearly totally insane. However as these pages have clearly illustrated many times;

> Just because something is completely insane doesn't mean it isn't happening.

Currently there are thousands of so called "TI's" taking to social media to basically scream for assistance from anyone at all. Due to the savage culture of monetisation, they have been targeted by cult members seeking to turn them into products. This attention brings with it, a host of psychological warfare techniques which fall into one of the many INT categories listed and regularly referenced on this website. Some of their pleas for assistance seem utterly genuine and not without emotional gravitas. Many of these people have literally no idea why they have been targeted with directed energy weapons and relentless psychological warfare.

In most cases the cult members actively gang-stalking them will have been blackmailed with IP logs and browser history information which provides suitable grounds for investigation, prosecution and incarceration. This fundamental implementation of the stick motivator translates into the cult member spending most of their time fixating over sexual dysfunction. Usually of the most horrific nature. They then seek to project this dysfunction at their target using technology and methods associated with the many INT categories mentioned earlier. This serves to propagate the cult mentality but also to humiliate and debase the cult member by forcing them to obsess over subjects which are undoubtedly personally relevant to them and that nobody could consider in any way attractive.

Many of these cult members were compelled into the clandestine world through being victims of abuse. Consequently they consider themselves to be uniquely qualified to force their fixations onto their targets. This is encouraged by their controllers to continue cult expansion, but also to prevent them from furthering their progress in terms of advancement or climbing the ladder on their perverted course of further power driven obscenities. The fact that they should be the very ones dedicated to breaking their repetitive abusive cycle, doesn't occur to them. This is due to their either learned cult psychopathy, or a congenital psychopathy which is now present in 5-10% of homo-sapiens.

Browsing the feeds of any social media platform will invariably include content that has been deliberately shown to a very wide cross section of end users. Within most of this content is some preposterous and elaborate clandestine con. In addition much of it is designed to provoke an emotive response. Because these platforms are massively monetised, there exists a conduit for interest groups to have their content seen more broadly than the next interest group. Google were notorious for this type of practice when they implemented AdWords and paid ranking through an auction bidding system. Their algorithms on YouTube were rapidly understood by the users to represent some truly vicious marketing methods which were also being used by paid subscribers to their clandestine API access.

The same basic principle applies across all social media. This was illuminated in the hideously ill conceived 'Russia Gate' scandal in 2018 when the only evidence of election interference was a few thousand dollars worth of paid promo news content on Facebook. Nothing that Rachel Madow couldn't squeeze out a few tears for, but hideous nonetheless.

At the other end is the individual being deliberately targeted with content by cult members who have simply bought into the clandestine side of the API services offered by the social media platform(s). This is nothing new for the intelligence agencies and their illegitimate counterparts in the rest of the clandestine community. These are people who use television and radio broadcasts to make their targets believe their device is speaking directly to them. It's been going on since at least the 1970's and probably before. Whatever the new medium is, the cult of psychopathy derive some way of co-opting it to give their broken minded, sexually dysfunctional, petty and mendacious operatives something to do all day. Their fetishised obsession with dysfunction is of the most visceral kind and they seek to spread it around as much as possible.

The combination of these two factors results in their idea of 'busy work' amounting to trying to con their targets into providing evidence that the target is as gullible and weak minded as they were. When these beta plus cult members had directed energy weapons used against them to bend their minds into a dysfunctional state, they capitulated more or less straight away. This early failure leaves them with an unavoidable and distinctly cancerous under achievement complex. They can not hide from the psychologically crippling fact that they were weaker and lesser than the next person in terms of succumbing to blatant mind control. The fact that they offered up insurance by way of IP logs and browser history, means that they will never, ever be free of the cult. The cult preys on this fundamental fear and insecurity by ramping up the pressure on the cult member. They must get a result, because it's an organised criminal syndicate and as mentioned, cash flows up.

It is no wonder that many of these cult members opt for the release of suicide rather than be ever under the boot of their controllers. Otherwise their entire lives are spent locked into a spiral of dysfunction which they are incapable of escaping. This quite insidious reality is what underpins the contemporary privatisation of the intelligence industry. An incomprehensibly large number of people all living a psychopathic and outwardly insane facsimile of a lifestyle. One filled with mediocrity, sickening dysfunction and half baked exchanges of hidden meaning. All they do all day - every day, is attempt to force a similar con on their targets as was forced on them. Consequently when they find a target that is able to resist, they must either game the system in some further way or cry wolf up the chain to the more capable tiers of their cult hierarchy.

The higher echelons of any criminal racket will always seek to enforce the failed antics of their lesser members. The clandestine cult is no different in this regard. In fact, they employ a truly psychotic and abstract dedication to enforcing utter horseshit. The TI's active on social media describe a pattern of gang-stalking malevolence which is done at quite a low level. Their houses are broken into and obscure signs are left to confuse them. Their cars are targeted with abstract items tied onto door handles. They report endless targeting with SIG-INT or ELF-INT technologies. If they talk about their experiences they find the attention increased in both scale and frequency. Higher stratas of the cult include civil service departments. The police and the military are no exception to this. Hence why John Lenard Walso ended up with black helicopters flying over his house.

Through the use of modified 'over-the-horizon' radar supporting electromagnetic signature targeting, they hear voices. Similarly in a near field context, Hyper Sonic Sound installations in public venues, shops, train platforms and hospital wards also facilitate the targeting with audio that nobody else can hear. Often these voices will be harassing them or instructing them to self harm, create conflict, commit acts of violence, target other people with similar psychological methods, target children in unhealthy ways, target people of different races and generally act in ways that will be considered at least highly anti social, if not blatantly criminal.

Reading through some of the symptoms described by the Targeted Individuals, a series of clear patterns emerges. Analysing how they interact with each other illuminates the methods employed by their cult member gang-stalkers. These patterns reveal an adherence to certain methods which go back many centuries if not millennia and have been documented in previous articles.

However as time goes on, there are appears to be more TI's sharing their knowledge and experiences. Specifically people with a greater technical understanding As with any online community it is subject to the dynamics of ego and affiliation. This is a rich feeding ground for the clandestine community, especially as they are the ones who have created it.

But therein lies their greatest vulnerability. The psychopathic methods developed centuries and millennia ago are considered to be a cult secret. This reveals the fact that some of the technological methods they are still using must also have been in operation during some previous technically advanced paradigm.

This is a big deal. The forces which have profited from this technology really can't afford to admit that they have ever used it or even had possession of it. Consequently there are trapped in a catch 22 situation. This does nothing to reduce their levels of criminal and overtly satanic insanity. The critically damaging reality that the clandestine community have been hiding technology for thousands of years, can not be understated in terms of controversy.

The sensitivity of this situation means that disseminating access to the technology must be heavily obfuscated. By way of a comparison, the common household appliance of the microwave houses a device that is actually exceptionally dangerous. Not only could a magnetron be verily easily utilised to zap your neighbours with painful directed microwave beams, but also influence or even destroy the integrated circuits in their electronic items.

The magnetron was a heavily classified technology synonymous with military uses of radar. This was the case until relatively recently. Then it was disseminated to the commercial sector for use in telecommunications and of course, the microwave oven.

The same goes for the more contentious technology used by the clandestine community. It was previously only available to the upper ranks of the military. Prior to that it was available to the upper ranks of the clergy. Prior to that it was preserved by specific military orders during a global cataclysm. They then disseminated specific social and engineering methods to stone age tribes who were in the process of raising their civilisations from scratch.

The historical implications are far reaching and would surely result in serious civil unrest were they made public. Consequently, the cult must at all times obfuscate and distract from the nature of the technologies in play. This is done in the same way that the potential of a magnetron is hidden from the average user. They put the food in their microwave oven, close the door, turn the dial, wait until they hear a pinging sound and hey presto, their food is warm. The potential to utilise the magnetron to communicate with geostationary satellites, is not apparent. Neither is targeting the lungs of a passer by with a precise frequency to invoke a spontaneous coughing fit. These optional, yet entirely feasible uses do not even occur to the user invested purely in heating up their bowl of instant Madagascar custard.

In this way, the clandestine community subvert their own operatives by forcing them to perform and believe in the effectiveness of utterly abstract rituals. These rituals are perceived as having some direct impact on the desired result. In reality they are pointless signalling rituals which also form part of the psychopathic obsession with the abstract. This obfuscates the RF based technology, disguises itself as the esoteric and also propagates the fixation with the irrational. Mindless obedience is a key component of the cult self promotion philosophy. It is the most necrotic of the cancer cells that threaten the existence of the host - and themselves.

To put it simply, the cult and its' members are utterly dependent on technology which is black boxed to them. Different strata of the layer-cake are exposed to certain elements of the numerous technological methods. But none have total oversight. This (in their spin-dryer full of feces collective reasoning capacity) represents some form of leveler or democratising force. Consequently their denial and fear of the technology used by the higher stratas serves to further encourage their obsession with irrational psychopathy. It's the only way they can prove themselves worthy of expanding their affiliate network, thereby gaining access to the additional value these higher stratas may hold.

To briefly summarise; social media is awash with broken minded assets of the clandestine agencies and organisations. They integrate technology which is more advanced and also previously isolated in order to leverage yet more value. Currently we are seeing the rolling out of so called 'AI' entities across social media platforms and web3.0 applications. It does not take a detective to draw a line between a seemingly automated chatbot character encouraging a teenager to commit suicide and the activities of a psychopathic cult of confidence trickery. Neither does it take a master of deductive reasoning to see the value (to a cult of revisionism and protectionism) in users asking the in-house AI chatbot if something is real or not. The defacto mainstream narratives of Wikipedia and fact checkers are being spouted all over the world, every minute of every day in every conceivable language.

This relentless monetisation and quest for the currency of deception is all a symptom of the global currency fail which happened in 2008 - 2010. The NWO have decided that the new monetary paradigm should be based on adjusted value systems. Provide some form of Marxist welfare state and focus everybody's time and energy into serving the psychopathic and abstract goals of a cult which obviously still relies on value flowing up and shit flowing down.

In effect, things have gotten so self defeating in the clandestine community - as a direct result of the growth > quality economic brain fart mentioned previously, that the intelligence industry is literally consuming itself from within. There are now so many people who have been thrown under the bus of the NWO clandestine technology dissemination, that the only market left for them to target are already being targeted by somebody else.

In many ways, it seems that the massive intelligence drive that came in the form of the Covid19 psyop, was always doomed. The higher stratas of the intelligence industry were blatantly throwing their lower ranks directly under a bus. This would be part of the same psyop that compelled hundreds of millions of already compromised people people to exhibit yet further blind compliance. This was manifested through the go-along-to-get-along virtue signalling of utterly ineffective masking and highly irrational vaccinations.

Every single component of the Covid19 global psyop was co-opted in numerous ways that would serve the interests of some section of the clandestine community. It would be impossible not to perceive the entire stunt as some form of a last ditch attempt in protectionism by a rapidly failing attempt to turn a cult of mind control into a viable industry.

Most of the TI's report being in their current situation for approximately seven and a half to eight years. This fits exactly with the immediate prelude to the so called 'pandemic' responses by all W.H.O signatory nations. It also ties in with the statement by Dominic Cummings, a British advisor to the then Prime Minister, Boris Johnson. He announced on his personal blog that the UK civil service needed mavericks, social misfits and loners. This was basically a checkered flag for the more acutely deranged members of the clandestine cult to get their products to market and to do it bloody soon.

What nobody on social media wants to tell the TI's is who it is that's targeting them. All they can figure out is that it's persons in the indirect employ of the security and intelligence agencies in their particular market. This is entirely accurate, but they have not yet seen through the veil of a cult that has plagued humanity for thousands of years. There have been ardent attempts to curtail and even eradicate the cult in decades, centuries and millennia past. However every single one of them was subject to infiltration and subversion. The cult pervades every community on Earth and does so for a reason. It is a self replicating virus, an auto infecting worm and ultimately a consistent distributed denial of service attack on the collective psyche of the entire global population.

The number of neurons in the brain is estimated to be in the region of eight billion. There is a school of thought that says when this number equals the number of human minds active on the planet, the Schumann frequency acts as base carrier wave to synchronise the minds of all humans. Thereby advancing the human race to their next level of evolution. It would not be unreasonable to imagine that there are extensive forces in play to prevent this from happening. The TI's and those who are experiencing some form of 'awakening' would represent preliminary barriers to the cults relentless march on the last line of resistance. Conscientious individuals are both a threat and a potential source of busy work to those invested in maintaining an advantage through technological disparity.

As such, all the TI's have value according to some bizarre meter used by their gang-stalkers. For many it is the fact that they don't back down easily. For others it is their ability to function under pressure. For some it will be as a result of previous employment in roles considered to have transferable skills. As mentioned, the cult is fixated with altering value systems. The nature of what they do is of relatively little importance, what's important is that they do it in the most psychopathic and ritualistic way. Thereby fulfilling the required perpetuation of the abstract which is the greatest factor in protecting the unspeakable truth of where their advantage originally came from.
